I have a class with a map, one of the member functions of which is key_compare (in the header). I would like the function key_compare to throw an exception if the key being compared is not in the map, but for some reason it always returns true and does not throw an exception (this is probably because of the way I set things up, but I don't know how to fix it). #include #include #include #include #include #include #include #include #include class S{ std::vector ss; public: void set(int i){ ss.push_back(i); } void merge(const S &s2){ for(int i = 0; i =(const S &s2){ return ss>= 6d1f23a050
