I have tried wicd and others but I always get stuck because I can't connect to the internet when the card is connected to my custom access point. I can't change all my routers so I was wondering if some1 on stackoverflow knows how can I do this? Thanks. A: As said by @David Korn, you have to use bridge mode, because when you connect the access point's wifi to the internet router's wifi, the internet router will consider the access point as a network device. To do this you need: a WiFi adaptor with USB a custom linux/architecture on a usb drive or microSD You must create the usb image with the packages that you want, so you can download them from the internet, but the main ones are: iptables for WAN connectivity static IP configuration 802.1x authentication The beginning of the instructions here depend on your wireless adaptor. If you are on an Asus RT-AC68U, you can start with the tutorial here. You must install the packages on a LiveUSB, because you cannot mount a hard disk when you're in LiveUSB mode, so you must have all the packages on a liveusb. If you're using arch on the linux system: compile the packages with makepkg -y run pacman - 6d1f23a050
